Putting Your Supporters at the Center of Your Email Marketing Strategy
Donors crave more authentic relationships with the nonprofits they support. They want to feel engaged and appreciated. Sounds easy enough, right? Well yes and no.

Email can be a great way to grow connections, but inboxes are overflowing with emails vying for attention. Will your emails be ignored, deleted, or opened? The answer depends on how well you know each of your supporters, and how relevant and timely your emails are.
The traditional method of using “batch and blast” emails won’t work. Your supporters should only be getting content that is meaningful to them. To get there, you need your donor contact database and your email marketing system “talking” to one another. Otherwise, you are missing opportunities to engage supporters and turn them into life-long donors. And, making matters worse, you may be doing more harm than good using one-to-many emails — to both your engagement and sender reputation.
Segmentation is awesome

When your contact database and email system integrate, you can drive donor acquisition, keep the donors you have, and engage lapsed donors by sending emails that are more in tune with your supporters’ interest — sending the right message, to the right person, at the right time.

31% of North American donors say they are most inspired to give by email.¹

right message
right time
Gain a full picture of each of your supporters and email engagement all in one place. And the more you understand your supporters, the easier it is to make them feel like VIPs — encouraging them to stay committed to your cause.

Spark instant action

56% of North American donors say they are most likely to give repeatedly to an organization if they receive regular communication.¹

Data that’s so fresh, so clean, so complete

Segmentation starts with data. And if you aren’t keeping your donor and email marketing data fresh, clean, and complete, how can you send relevant messages to engage supporters?

fresh Imported quickly and efficiently

clean
Healthy, standardized, and without duplicate records

complete
Access the full picture of each supporter, no blind spots

72% of donors say poor content — whether too vague, irrelevant, dull, or inconvenient — affects whether or not they donate to a nonprofit.²
Win your supporters over
